Parents. "Father" is 'fù-chin; child-words like "papa" are 'bà-ba and dyē. One refers to his own father politely as wǒ-'fù-chin, jyā-'fù, or jyā-'yán, or, if he is deceased, shyān-'fù or shyān-'yán; the father of the person addressed is politely referred to as nǐ²⁴fù-chin, (nín-de-)lǎw-tày-'yé, or lìng-'dzwēn. "Mother" is 'mǔ-chin; child-words are mā, 'mā-ma, and nyáng. One refers to his own mother politely as wǒ-'mǔ-chin, jyā-'mǔ, or jyā-'tsź, or, if she is deceased, shyān-'mǔ or shyān-'tsź; the mother of the person addressed is politely referred to as nǐ-'mǔ-chin, (nín-de-)lǎw-'tày-tay, or lìng-'táng. The collective terms for parents are fù-'mǔ and (literary) shwāng-'chīn.

Brothers and Sisters. The fundamental elements involved are shyūng or gē for "brother older than the speaker", dì for "brother younger than the speaker", jyě for "sister older than the speaker", and mèy for "sister younger than the speaker". In referring to a brother or sister one says 'gē-ge, 'dì-di, 'jyě-jye, and 'mèy-mèy. In referring politely to one's own brother or sister, when addressing someone outside the family, one may say rather jyā-'shyūng, shè-'dì, jyā-'jyě, and shè-'mèy. In referring politely to the brother or sister of the one spoken to, one says often lìng-'shyūng, lìng-'dì, lìng-'jyě, and lìng-'mèy. Collective terms are 'dì-shyung "brothers" and jyě-'mèy "sisters".

The children in a family are sometimes designated serially: dà-'gē, èr-'gē, sān-'gē and so on for the older brothers, shyǎw-'dì(-di) for the youngest brother (or for oneself); dà-'jyě, èr-'jyě and so on for sisters; shyǎw-'mèy for the youngest little sister; lǎw-'dà, lǎw-'èr, lǎw-'sān (or lǎw-'sār) and so on, either naming just the males in order or naming all the children, male and female, in order. Such terms are used generally within the family. (dà "big"; shyǎw "small"; lǎw "old".)

Children. Parents address their children by name, and refer to them familiarly as wǒm-(nèy-ge-)lǎw-'dà "our oldest son", wǒm-(nèy-ge-)lǎw-'èr "our second oldest son", and so on. Other terms used to refer to one's children are (wǒ-de-)'háy-dz "(my) child", -'ér-dz "(my) son", -'nywǔ-ér "(my) daughter". Very formally, as in correspondence, a parent may refer to sons simply as ér, to daughters simply as nywǔ. The children of the person addressed are formally referred to as lìng-'láng "your son" and lìng-'ày "your daughter".

Husband and Wife. The general rather formal terms are 'jàng-fu and 'chī-dz. At present reference is often made to any husband or wife with the terms 'shyān-sheng "mister, sir", and 'tày-tay "Mrs., madam". An older term which one used in referring to one's own wife when speaking to someone outside the family circle is 'nèy-rén "person who stays within (the house)". A husband and wife are collectively referred to as fū-'fù, gūng-mu-'lyǎ, gūm-'lyǎ, lyǎng-'kěw-dz, or lyǎng-'kěwr.

Grandparents. Paternal grandfather is called 'yé-ye or dzǔ-'fù; paternal grandmother is called 'nǎy-nay or dzǔ-'mǔ. Maternal grandfather is 'lǎw-yé or wày-dzǔ-'fù; maternal grandmother is 'nǎy-nay or wày-dzǔ-'mǔ. The terms lìng- "your", jyā- "my", and shyān- "my deceased" may be prefixed to dzǔ-'fù and dzǔ-'mǔ. Great-grandfather (father's paternal grandfather) is dzēng-'dzǔ, and his father is gāw-'dzǔ; their wives are dzēng-dzǔ-'mǔ and gāw-dzǔ-'mǔ. Other relationships than those on the father's father's side are indirectly expressed as "father's maternal grandfather", "maternal grandmother's father", and so on.

Grandchildren. One's sons' sons are 'swēn-dz; one's sons' daughters are swēn-'nywǔr. One's daughters' sons are wày-'swēn; one's daughters' daughters are wày-swēn-'nywǔr. Great-grandchildren through the male line are 'dzēng-swēn or 'chúng-swēn-dz; their sons are 'shywán-swēn. Other great-grandchildren than those through the male line are called "daughter's male-line grandchildren", "son's female-line grandchildren", and so on.

shū 叔 shěn 嬸
gū 姑
fū. 夫
jyèw 舅 yí 姨

Uncles and Aunts. An older brother of one's father is called 'bwó-bwo or bwó-'fù; if there are several, they are enumerated as dà-'bwó-bwo, èr-'bwó-bwo, and so on. lǎw-'bwó "old uncle" is a term of address to one's father's male friend or the father of one's friend. An aunt who is the wife of one's father's older brother is called bwó-'mǔ; such aunts are likewise numbered, depending not on their own relative age but on the relative age of their husbands. An alternate way of numbering such aunts is with the terms dà-'mā, èr-dà-'mā, and so on.

A younger brother of one's father is called 'shū-shu or shū-'fù, numbered as èr-'shū and so on. The numbering is in terms of position among all the brothers, not just the younger ones, so that there can be no dà-'shū, no èr-'shū if the father is the second son of his parents, and so on.

An aunt who is the wife of one's father's younger brother is called 'shěn-dz or shěn-'mǔ, similarly numbered on the basis of the relative ages of their husbands.

An aunt who is one's father's sister (any age) is called 'gū-gu, gū-'mā, or gū-'mǔ, numbered dà-, èr-, etc. An uncle who is the husband of such an aunt is called 'gū-fū, numbered on the basis of their wives' relative ages, not their own.

An uncle who is one's mother's brother (any age) is called 'jyèw-jyew or jyèw-'fù, numbered as are the others. The wife of such an uncle is called 'jyèw-mǔ, similarly numbered.

An aunt who is one's mother's sister (any age) is called yér or yí-'mǔ, with similar numbering; the husband of such an aunt is called 'yí-fū.

Nephews and Nieces. Your father's brothers and sisters, and your father's brothers' wives, call you 'jŕ(-dz) or 'jŕ-er if you are male ("nephew"), 'jŕ-nywur if you are female ("niece").

Your father's sisters' husbands, however, will prefix those terms with wày-.

Your mother's brothers and sisters, and their wives and husbands, will call you 'wày-sheng if you are male, wày-sheng-'nywŭr if you are female.

Most of these terms can be enumerated when there is more than one: dà-'jŕ-dz, èr-'jŕ-dz, and so on; dà-'wày-sheng, èr-'wày-sheng, and so on.

Cousins. The children of two brothers may call each other simply by the various terms for "brother" and "sister" (older and younger in each case). When necessary to specify that the relationship is that of cousins, not of brothers and sisters, the term táng- or 'shū-bwo is prefixed.

The children of two sisters or of a brother and sister, but of the same generation, call each other by the terms byăw-'gē "male cousin older than oneself", byăw-'dì "male cousin younger than oneself", byăw-'jyĕ "female cousin older than oneself", byăw-'mèy "female cousin younger than oneself". When talking about these cousins, gū- is prefixed to specify the child of one's father's sister, and yí- is prefixed to specify the child of one's mother's sister. Without one of these prefixes, the terms are assumed to refer to children of one's mother's brother.

In-Laws. A man calls his father-in-law ywè-'fù, and refers to him when speaking to others as 'jàng-rén; he calls his mother-in-law ywè-'mŭ and refers to her as jàng-'mŭ or jàng-mŭ-'nyáng. A woman calls her father-in-law 'bà-ba and refers to him as 'gūng-gung; she calls her mother-in-law 'mā-ma and refers to her as 'pwó-pwo. Notice that a woman calls her husband's parents by the same names he uses.

A man or woman calls his or her sons-in-law and daughters-in-law by name, but refers to a son-in-law as 'nywŭ-shywù and a daughter-in-law as ér-'shí-fu or ér-'shí-fer.

A sister-in-law who is the wife of an elder brother is called 'săw-dz, numbered 'dà-săw, 'èr-săw, etc.

A sister-in-law who is the wife of a younger brother is called dì-'mèy.

A sister-in-law who is the older sister of one's wife is called dà-'yí-dz; the younger sister of one's wife is shyăw-'yí-dz. All sisters of one's wife may be numbered as dà-'yí, èr-'yí, etc.

A brother-in-law who is the brother of one's wife is called by name or by the terms the wife uses, but the wife's older brother is referred to as nèy-'shyūng, her younger brother as nèy-'dì.

A brother-in-law who is one's older sister's husband is called 'jyĕ-fu; a younger sister's husband is 'mèy-fu.

A brother-in-law who is one's wife's sister's husband is referred to as 'lyán-jīn, or, by number, dà-'yí-fu, èr-'yí-fu, etc. He is addressed by personal name.

A wife addresses her husband's brothers and sisters as he does, but older brothers of one's husband may be referred to as 'dà-bāy-dz, and younger brothers as 'shyăw-shū-dz.

B. WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The forms treated in this Appendix are all grammatically Mmeas. There are three systems in use: the Old Standard, adopted in 1914; the Market Standard, adopted in 1929 as a step towards clearer correlation with the Metric System; and the Metric System, now official for government use but not yet universal. English equivalents are given in what follows when they exist; otherwise the Chinese term is defined in terms of other Chinese terms and by equivalence in English or Metric measure.

Weight

OLD STANDARD

分	fēn	none
錢	chyán	mace = 10 fēn
兩	lyǎng	tael = 10 chyán = 37.8 grams
斤	jīn	catty = 16 lyǎng =604.79 grams, or 1.33 pounds
擔	dàn	picul =100 jīn = 60.479 kilos, or 133.33 pounds

MARKET STANDARD

The terms are the same as the above, with shì 市 prefixed. The Market Standard lyǎng=31.25 grams, or 1.1 ounces; the Market Standard jīn=500 grams, or 1.1 pounds; the Market Standard dàn=110.23 pounds.

METRIC SYSTEM

The terms, except for metric ton, are made by prefixing gūng 公 to the Old Standard terms:

gūng-ˈfēn	gram
gūng-ˈchyán	decagram
gūng-ˈlyǎng	hectogram
gūng-ˈjīn	kilogram
gūng-ˈdwèn	metric ton (100 kilograms)

Capacity

OLD STANDARD

合	hé
升	shēng=10 hé	=1.09 liquid quarts, or 1.035 liters
斗	dĕw =10 shēng
斛	hú = 5 dĕw
石	shí = 2 hú

MARKET STANDARD

Formed from the above by prefixing shì 市 ; hú is omitted. 10 Market Standard hé=1 Market Standard shēng=1 liter; 10 shēng=1 dĕw; 10 dĕw=1 shí.

METRIC SYSTEM

Formed from the Old Standard terms by prefixing gūng 公 , omitting hú:

gūng-ˈhé	deciliter
gūng-ˈshēng	liter
gūng-ˈdĕw	decaliter
gūng-ˈshí	hectoliter

Length

OLD STANDARD

分	fēn
寸	tswèn = 10 fēn	= 1.41 inches
尺	chř = 10 tswèn	=14.1 inches
丈	jàng = 10 chř	=11.75 feet
里	lĭ =180 jàng	=about ⅓ mile

MARKET STANDARD

Formed from the above by prefixing shì 市 . A Market Standard chř=⅓ meter; the Market Standard lĭ is defined as 150 jàng, thus equaling ½ kilometer or 0.31 mile.

METRIC SYSTEM

Formed from the Old Standard terms by prefixing gūng 公 ; tswèn is omitted:

gūng-'lí	millimeter
gūng-'fēn	centimeter
gūng-'chř	meter
gūng-'jàng	decameter
gūng-'lĭ	kilometer

Area

"Square meter, square inch", and so on, are formed by prefixing fāng 方 to the appropriate term of length.

OLD STANDARD

畝	mŭ	= 60 fāng-'jàng=⅙ acre
頃	chĭng	=100 mŭ
方里	fāng-'lĭ=540 mŭ

MARKET STANDARD

Prefix shì 市 as usual. One shì-'mŭ=0.1647 acre; one shì-'chĭng=16.47 acres, or 100 shì-'mŭ.

METRIC SYSTEM

Prefix gūng 公 as usual. A gūng-'mŭ is an are; a gūng-'chĭng is a hectare.

General

Certain of the most important terms of the English system of weights and measures are formed from the nearest equivalents in the various Chinese systems by prefixing yīng "English". Thus yīng-'mŭ is an acre, yīng-'chř an English foot, yīng-'lĭ an English mile. bàng 磅 "pound" is a word taken from English.

When finer subdivisions of any system of weighing or measuring are needed, there is a series of four terms which are used, each specifying a tenth of the preceding:

分	fēn
釐，厘	lí
毫	háw
絲	sz̄

The first two of these will be found in the above tables. Thus, referring to length, gūng-'háw is ⅒ millimeter, gūng-'sz̄ 1/100 millimeter; in referring to weight the same terms are ⅒ and 1/100 gram.
